

Supply Chain Specialist

Aerospace/Energy Low Carbon Sector

South West based with extensive UK travel
Package circa £50K plus benefits

SWMAS plays a key role in providing tailored advice to manufacturing businesses throughout England. Part of a national business service for building economic growth, our aim is to help manufacturing businesses of all sizes develop and prosper, with a specific focus on improving the competitiveness and growth of SME's.

Our supply chain specialists work with manufacturers and their suppliers to develop advanced manufacturing supply chains through the delivery of specialist support programmes. These programmes include diagnostic reviews, consultancy advice and the development and implementation of improvement plans, backed by funding, training and networking events.

As a supply chain specialist you will work closely with leading OEM's, Primes, First Tier organisations, and their suppliers in order to develop relationships, improve effectiveness and build sustainable growth for all.

Your role will involve

- Working with key leaders in OEM's, Primes and First Tier organisations to obtain an in depth understanding and insight into their sector and the requirements and development of their supply chain strategy
- Developing suppliers' awareness and understanding of the business opportunities available to them through best practice supply chain management
- Managing client relationships through the development and delivery of support services to suppliers, such as improvement projects, consultancy advice and training. Build their capability to engage and operate within supply chains and ensure sustained improvement for both customer and supplier
- Sharing best practice with other relevant stakeholders and contributing to a national programme for supply chain development within manufacturing.

To be successful in this role you will

- Have extensive experience and understanding of supply chain strategy development and management within the aerospace or energy sectors at OEM, Prime, First Tier or sector group level
- Be highly commercial with a comprehensive understanding of business finance, operations and marketing, able to operate at strategic level with client businesses
- Be able to build effective relationships with clients engaged in supply through an in-depth understanding of the challenges encountered when working within supply chains
- Possess a successful track record of delivering business advice and developing solutions through effective client management
- Possess strong analytical and organisational skills combined with attention to detail. Pragmatic, numerate with excellent presentation and communication skills
- Be qualified to degree/HNC/HND level within a relevant technical or engineering discipline.

This is an excellent opportunity to add real value to the development and growth of UK manufacturing whilst being part of a thriving and rewarding business.

If you feel you can improve effectiveness and build sustainable growth for all, please email your CV to our consultant: andrewsavage@resource4.co.uk
